To whom it concerns:

As a Hayward resident, and Chabot College full time student, most of my activities and daily life happen and start in the area. Reading a couple of articles explain the new creation of two new power plants makes me wonder, if people and environment are really being considered. I am personally against this whole situation, because me like most people are concern about global warming and we see the changes that have been going on throughout the past years, and see how much help the environment need and it is not fair that while people are trying to save energy at home, school, offices, and other places where they can, some others are going to use that energy for the power plants. Not only Hayward residents are being concerned and alarmed by this issued but also the residents of the surrounding cities. I believe that there has to be a way to do and reach what your goal for the bay area is and also help to not destroy the environment we live in, not just for Hayward but for the world itself, because if we don't, who will? I had the chance to communicate with people who are against the power plants as well and also who do not really have a position they have a really interesting point of view, but I believe and know what the real deal is, and what is going on with the world and the only thing that needs is our help that we are obligated to provide and this power plants are far from being the right help, but as not mentioned I haven't got the chance to meet someone who is with the power plants. The bay area might need a lot of help itself but as mentioned before there has to be another way. If you can think it over and realize what we need, because is not about not what we want but what we need, not only for ourselves but for our next generations also. I appreciate your time and patient, hopefully voices can be heard.

Thank you
