Sir,

As a California native, I am sad to say that I am ashamed to reside in this state as it exists today. The arrogance and apathy of our state legislators and all of those who implement the laws has gone beyond the ridiculous.

The PCT legislation is not only invasive, unconstitutional and oppressive; it is totally without any type of common sense in how to deal with a problem. The basis of this nation as founded is that people are capable of making decisions for themselves in their everyday lives, such as the temperature they are comfortable with. It is not nor should it be the choice of a state agency to regulate the climate inside or outside of citizen's private homes. Further, I am willing to bet that your home office will not be subject to this moronic new rule!

I am demanding that this action be stopped now before the state of California opens a Pandora's box of self-perpetuating, compounding scenarios which will cost most of you your jobs; not to mention the lives and property which might be lost directly or indirectly due to this inane law.

Sincerely, William W. Fulkerson
